I chose an American form, the golden shovel, for today's poem. A type of cento, golden shovel poems are created from a poem and for a poet one wishes to honor. They are created from one line in another poem, and the new poem responds in some way to the original. I felt nothing but a golden shovel would do this week.

"A country that is bruised, but whole, benevolent but bold, fierce and free"

after Amanda Gorman

Wednesday last was a day that our country fretted over, prayed over, battled over, but that arrived anyway in a slow, cold glory. Is what's past just prologue? Bruised and fractured, we listened, irreconcilable but for Miss Gorman's verse molding us whole. If we can only remain benevolent, swallow the ready if, and, or but, while never failing to be bold -- for ferocity tempered is still fierce, and freedoms freely shared -- are the duty of the free.
